PAINTED GIRLS BARRED FROM VISITING CAMPS

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]

Patibogue, I. L., Aug. 29. So fine the military police at Camp Tibour will not let easier to tell, modest girls from the brazen and immoral, the authorities have secured action by the village board here. In a resolution the women are asked to give up cosmetics and bulky clothes.

The board has also suggested the arrest of unchaperoned misses caught strutting near the camp after 5 p. m.

Dr. Frank Overton, State Sanitary Supervisor, backed the anti-cosmetic resolution.

"What shall the girls use to protect their complexions?" he was asked.

"Soap," he replied laconically.

PITCHING TO FIGURE STRONGLY WHEN CUBS AND RED SOX TANGLE

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
New York, Aug. 29.—Pitching has been prominent in the history of the Red Sox and the Cubs, and the series between the two clubs will be no exception to the rule. According to advanced reports, the greatest ball clubs, and if it had been for the great work of their pitchers during the 1918 campaign, they would not be meeting on the field as they are today.
The Cubs have four strong seasoned pitchers in the line-up: Vaughn, Hendryx, Tyler and Douglas. They have others of considerable ability, but these four are the mainstay of the team.
Ruth, Myers, Bush and Jones are the four aces of the Red Sox, and they represent some pitching combinations without a doubt.
Bush and Douglas, of the combined forces, are the only pitchers with a winning percentage below .600.
The article is being written. The Cubs and Red Sox are the only two teams, and with the world's series coming at a much earlier date, and better pitch weather being in the air, it is likely that the series will be a close one. For those birds ought to keep the batters and the base running pretty well in hand.

Sport Snap Shots

When the Chicago Cubs and Boston Red Sox clash in the world's series, it will be the first time since 1903 that the two clubs have met in a series. It will be the first time since 1903 that the two clubs have met in a series. It will be the first time since 1903 that the two clubs have met in a series.

Chicago broke into the grand finale of the 1918 season, today, by winning the first game of the series. The Cubs won 7-5, and the Red Sox lost 5-7.

From this standpoint the big show will hold an added interest. As usual, the main interest before the series centers around the pitching. It is a run up a tree and looks as though the games would develop into a series of battles between southpaws and right-handers on the mound.

McCormick, it is believed, will be the first of his faith to Jim Vaughn and George Tyler. Red Sox fans figure that the Cubs will win the series. The Cubs are the favorites. This would mean that Babe Ruth will be used in the series.

Both managers stick to the men. The battle of left and right-handers will be more clearly defined in any series heretofore staged. The day of the pitcher is over. The day of the pitcher is over. The day of the pitcher is over.

After Johnson will long remember the season of 1918, now drawing to a close. To the Washington star, Johnson will be recalled as one who, having after another, the Washington club up to the present time, figured in no less than twenty-five of those long and hard-fought games. Johnson has taken part in fifteen games, but many of these long games were started and finished by the pitcher. The Washington record in extra-inning games is 10-10. Johnson has been victorious in 10 of these games and a loser in 10.

A good bet that Joe Leslie Bush will start the series for the Red Sox. Carl Mayhew, a Red Sox pitcher, is an entirely new pitcher. Whether Barrow would be a good bet in the third battle or not, Bush is a hard one to dope.

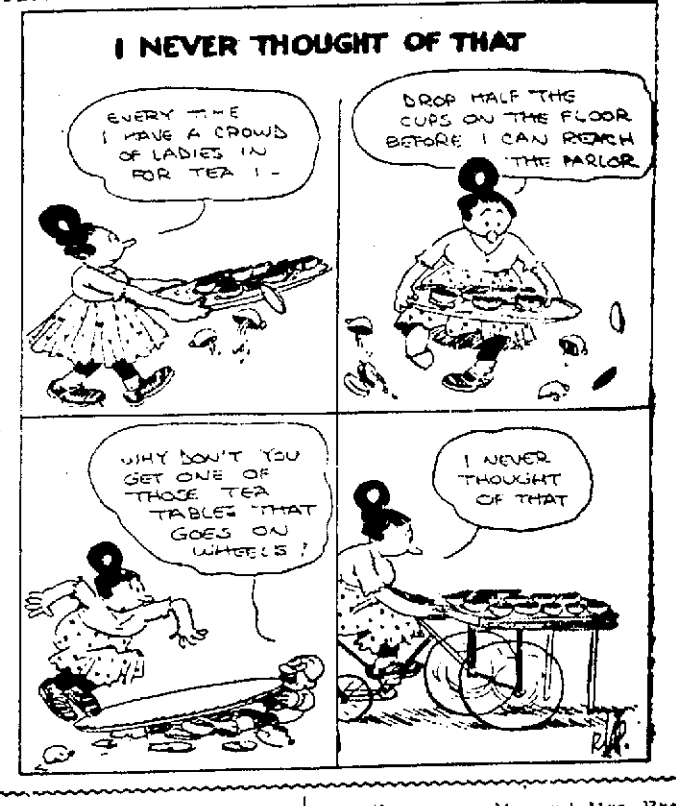

Benny Kauff's entrance into the city and his short absence from the city, he is about the only one who is at present enjoying did not seem to lessen his popularity. He is all over the country, popular today as he ever was before. So many fans have jumped to the shipyard, and the Cubs are the favorites. The Cubs are the favorites. The Cubs are the favorites.

No action has been taken to either prevent the jumping of players or to prevent the jumping of players. The Cubs are the favorites. The Cubs are the favorites. The Cubs are the favorites.

It is doubtful if Babe Ruth will be in the box at all, unless he should be called upon to pitch. His southern friends are cheering for him, and he is a hard one to dope.

The classified ads if you have anything to sell, they will surely sell for you.

FATHER WAS RIGHT.

HOODOO SITS TIGHT ON TRAIL OF DOYLE

[BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
New York, Aug. 29.—There's a full grown hoodoo camping close on the trail of Larry Doyle.
Since Larry was sent to the Cubs by Manager McGraw in the deal that brought Heinie Zimmerman to the Giants, Larry has been out of luck.
About the first thing Larry did after he became a member of the Cubs was to break a leg. This accident kept him out of the game for the rest of the season, and he came back in 1917 none too sure of himself in the field, and none too strong at the bat.
Everybody was satisfied that Doyle had seen his best days; that he was slated for the discard. But in January of this year the Cubs and Braves pulled off a trade which sent Doyle to Boston with Art Wilson.
The Cubs got Lefty Tyler in return. Before the present season opened, McGraw engineered a deal with McGraw, which sent Doyle to the Cubs. Doyle's teammates of a year ago, the Chicago Cubs, are preparing to slice the world's series melon and Doyle—well, Doyle is just out of luck.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Oh, a wise old owl is Barney the Owl. Although you might never guess it, and although he may wink, though he may blink, he's wise, yes he's wise, now confess it.
For he hunts in the night when there's hardly a light and no one can see what he's doing. He's soft on the wing as a zephyr in spring. Except when he's "too-wit, too-woe" he can't write poetry.
Now this is the song that I promised to tell you about in the last story—the song that Old Barney the Owl sang, you know. And I hope you like it, for he was very proud of it. Oh, my, yes, for he had made it up all himself, which shows that he was a wise bird, for every one, you know, can't write poetry.
Well, after that Uncle Lucky said to his little bunny nephew, "I think it's time for bed, don't you?" But of course the little bunny didn't think so. Did you ever know a little boy or girl who thought it was time for bed? I'm sure I didn't, so why should a little bunny think so?
And then the old gentleman rabbit looked at his gold watch and chain, and goodness me! It was half-past fourteen o'clock.
"You can't wait up another minute," said kind Uncle Lucky, sternly, "but not very sternly, you know. So Billy Bunny went upstairs to his little room and got into bed, over which the big moon shone through the window, and after a while he had a dream. For little bunny's dream, you know, Oh, my, yes, the dream of carrot candies and lettuce cakes and pumpkin pies and lollipops, just the same as you and I did when we were little, and just the same as you little readers do when you read this story. And after a while a little fairy flew in through the crack in the window, for it was just past midnight, and she said, "Billy, the little you see, not very far, but the little bunny didn't want to get a stiff neck and maybe something worse. And then the little fairy sat on the foot of the bed and said, "Little bunny, do you believe in fairies?"
An Billy Bunny whispered, "Of course I do. And then the little fairy said, "Well, then, I'll tell you a secret. There's a big box of something out in the garage, and that's little fairy flew away, and in the morning, bright and early, Billy Bunny went out to the garage and what do you think he found? Maybe you've guessed already. Well, anyway, I'll tell you. A big box of lollipops, and when he told his Uncle Lucky, that kind old gentleman rabbit laughed and said that the little fairy knew as much as he did, and maybe more for all he knew.

Milton, Aug. 28.—Last evening, Tuesday, Aug. 27, a summer concert of organ and chamber music was given at the S. D. B. church at Milton by President Daland, assisted by a group of instrumental players.
The program was made up of carefully selected numbers which were thoughtfully arranged. Dr. Daland made clear the more difficult points of the program by a brief introductory explanation.
It was timely that the first part of the concert should begin with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner, and end with the same melody. It was also appropriate that the second part of the concert should commence with the singing of America and end with the Jubilee overture by Weber from which the melody was originally taken.
While Guilman's march, religious music, it is nevertheless always pleasing. Anita's dance and the Swedish wedding march were particularly enjoyable. The choice of the organ pieces was effective, matching each part of the program beginning and ending with a patriotic melody.
In the trios, the violins played remarkably well together for young players. The enlargement of one piece by having instead of one player, two, was a very rich tonal effect.
It was too much to expect that, without a leader, all of the instrumentalists should play together with precision in the allegro from the Sixth Symphony, but in spite of this, the slight uncertainty in attack was more than atoned for by the variety in tone color. The combination afforded a richness unequalled except in a large orchestra.
The Suite Gothique is a daring innovation in organ music, the more pleasing because of its startling originality.
Dr. Daland's quartet Mignonne was an attempt to produce in miniature a string quartet in strictly classic form. That he had succeeded was shown by the appreciation with which this number was received.
The familiar orchestra pieces, the Ave March, and Schubert's march, were by no means ruined by the treatment they received.
All lovers of organ music were more than satisfied and went home with the wish that such concerts might be given more frequently.
The instrumental players played so well together because they had practiced often enough to be in real sympathy with one another. Although they were young and without a leader, there was no feeling of uncertainty or embarrassment to the audience.
The whole program was played with good taste and with unusually good interpretation and expression. That the hearers did not become tired at the length of the program was shown by the applause with which the last numbers were received.
The proceeds of the concert, in excess of expenses, were given to the Milton Red Cross.
Howard C. Stewart has accepted a position in the Mineral Point high school for the coming year, and his father, Hugh T. Stewart will take charge of his drug business during his absence, with W. P. Clarke as pharmacist in charge of the prescription department.
W. W. Vaughn of Burlington, who was a student here fifty-three years ago, called on the writer Sunday. It was his first visit to the village much since he found it changed and improved since his school days.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 23 years of age and I have been keeping company with a man several years. He never has told me just how old he is, but I am quite sure he is over 35.

This man is the most attractive one I have ever known and I just can't help loving him. I think he just goes with me for my companionship because he is a woman hater and says he never intends to marry.

Do you think he has any right to keep me in places where he does not marry me? In other respects he seems to be an honorable man.

Should I give up his friendship under the circumstances? I think it will break my heart if I have to.

If you do not think the man is doing the right thing you are at liberty to refuse his attentions. Since he tells you frankly that he does not intend to marry, he feels that he has freed himself from responsibility. As long as he gives you pleasure, he thinks he is paying for the companionship he asks. I believe you will be happier to continue with the relationship than to give him up entirely. Perhaps he will change his mind and decide to marry you after all.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I have a girl whom I like very much. One evening I invited her to come over and my boy friend and his chain came over. This girl was crazy about my friend and she tried every way to get him away from me, but she didn't. Since then she has been calling him over the phone and making him feel that she does not like her and it makes his mother angry to have her call so much. What do you think of such a girl? Should I keep her for a friend?

Simply the girl does not realize what bad form it is to run after boys. Tell her as kindly as you can, that the mother is angry and advise her to stop phoning. If you like her, keep her as a friend and try to help her.

her to see that it is better to be sought by boys than to seek them.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My husband is very unhappy. He has drunk and he is very mean to me. When he drinks he is jealous. He curses me and calls me all kinds of names. I can't please him in anything I do. He is ten years older than I am. Do you think that is the reason he does that?

I do not love him. Should I stay and take his abuse?

DESPERATE. You and not the difference in your ages. If you are made very unhappy by him and can live more comfortably if you leave him, I think you should leave.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am 15 years old and will be in high school this year. Do you think I should let boys see me home from evening parties and from church?

I think I can make the boys care for me. They are always very nice to me, but do not treat me like other girls. DOUBTFUL.

(2) You are too young to attend evening parties and you are too young to attend church at night unless you are accompanied by an older member of the family.

(3) Do not concern yourself with boys. When you are older they will probably like you. Now you are too young to receive their attention anyway.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a young man who seems to think a lot of me. I have been out with him and he is very nice. He is good looking and well thought of by everyone. Do you think it would be all right to invite him to take tea with me next Sunday night?

Do not invite him to take tea with you until you are better acquainted. For a few weeks or months let him invite you to places or simply call on you home. Then if you care for him, when you are very good friends, it will be all right to invite him to tea.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Will cocoa butter remove hollows from the neck?

MRS. K. N. H. Cocoa butter will fill out the hollows of the neck if you persevere long enough. You must not expect results too soon, and you must use it regularly every day.

six of whom died. Many things have changed since your grandmother's day, including the handling of money. Now you kids run into the living room with your books. Mother and Dad want to go over some accounts.

"I cannot be annoyed with accounts tonight, Edith. I'm in no mood for disputes."

"I don't wish to dispute, Jack. I only want to show you the impossibility of running the house without knowing how much I dare spend. In your grandmother's day people lived with little and money. They lived and made and bartered things. Now it's different. I cannot exchange 'homespun' for potatoes and meat, must have told you, Edith, that I give you all I can spare."

"It isn't that I want more, it's that I want it regularly—an allowance." "There you go again on your hobby," cried Perrol. "I consider that a man is the best handler of finances. My job is to earn and expend the money. Yours is to attend to the house and the children."

Edith controlled her desire to burst into tears of exasperation. "We argue in a circle, John," she said. "You won't give me an allowance because I cannot manage money economically. The reason I cannot be more economical is because I have no regular allowance. I never know when I'm going to have any money. So I have to run up bills. If I had only $15 a week, John, and had it regularly and didn't have to ask for it, I could save. I don't know how much."

"I can take care of the saving, Edith. I keep my insurance and my bank balances such as it is," he said. "There you go again on your hobby. Remembering his failure to get the raise, I asked Harmon for more money today. He turned me down when I was going to have any money. So I have to run up bills. If I had only $15 a week, John, and had it regularly and didn't have to ask for it, I could save. I don't know how much."

Side Talks

CHAINED TOGETHER.

Sometimes when one hears married people talk of the problems of married existence one would fancy they were chained together by a heavy chain that didn't permit either one of them to wander ten feet from the other in leisure hours.

For instance, a letter friend writes me that she is quite unhappy because her husband wants to sit down and read when he gets home while she wants to get out to the movies, or a concert, or something like that. "It is very tiresome for me to sit at home every evening," she writes, "and yet I insist on his going out more than once a week or so, he is sure to be cross about it."

Must They Do the Same Thing? One would rather from her letter that it is absolutely imperative they always do the same thing. Plainly the idea that he might stay at home and read and that she might go now and then to the theater with some of her friends or neighbors, has not occurred to her.

It is natural that she should want to get out after a day spent about the home. Of course I do not mean that they should spend every evening apart. There must be many tastes that they share in common, even if he does not

Recess Time For the Girls at Gossard's

"I can't believe that I am working in a factory, it's so congenial here," said a young married woman as she bathed her face in clear cold water at the Gossard brassiere factory yesterday afternoon.

"Everyone is so contented, and the work is so interesting—and before you think of getting a bit fatigued there's a ten minute recess both morning and afternoon. I think it's splendid."

"I should say it is," said a girl who finished her high school recently. "It's more fun than going to school. It's so clean and wholesome too—everything about the factory. And I love helping to make these pretty things!"

"Listen while I read some of the new activities of women," remarked a third girl as she lay resting luxuriously near a big window with its bank of cheerful flowers. "It's in the paper today, and I'll bet there aren't many that have as nice hours or such pleasant surroundings to work in."

Of the 112 testers connected with Wisconsin cow testing associations six are women.

A Vancouver, Wash., shipyard has a woman calker.

The United States has over 1,500 women dentists.

Over 8,000 women act as postmistresses in the United States.

The Women's Trade Union league of England now has a membership of over 200,000.

War experience in the employment of women as bank clerks has convinced British bankers that women are able to keep business secrets quite as well as men.

The first woman in the United States to work as an inspector of wireless apparatus is Miss Abbey Morrison, who is an expert in her line.

One-fifth of the working force in the Grant automobile factory in Cleveland are women.

The women outnumber the men by nearly two to one in the Prohibition party in New York state.

Many women and girls who have never been employed before have joined us in the last few weeks, for Janesville women have caught the spirit of the times and with women all over America they are earning money regardless of social position or family income.

We invite you to call at our office at your leisure, for we shall be glad to tell you about the art of brassiere making. It is so easy to learn and will prove so profitable to you.
